IS TORN TO PIECES BY FAMISHED LIONS

SAME ANIMALS APPEARED REGENTLY AT PANTAGES.

Well Known Trainer Is Sex On by the Educated Beasts, Breaking Practically Every Bone in His Body.

Emerson D. Dietrich, a Cornell graduate and noted animal trainer who appeared recently at Pantages, Salt Lake City, was set upon by five angry lions at Chicago Sunday morning and was literally torn to pieces by the infuriated beasts. The lions could not be driven away until forced back by formaldehyde fumes. Nearly every bone in Dietrich's body had been broken and it had been gored beyond recognition by the beasts.

While the lions were tearing Dietrich limb from limb, his fiancée, the real animal trainer in charge of the beasts, was telling Cy DeVrey, head animal keeper at Lincoln park, that the lions were the tamest in captivity and were not dangerous. A telephone message informing her of the tragedy interrupted her remarks to DeVrey.

Dietrich was manager of the animal act called "Mile. Adgie's performing lions," and was engaged to the lion tamer. They were to be married at Atlantic City, where they were to open her performances next week.

The lions, ten in number, were in two cages placed inside a box car. Dietrich had entered one of the cages to water the animals and prepare the car for its trip, while his fiancée, Adgie Castillo, went to Lincoln park to visit Cy DeVrey.

Story of the Tragedy.
When Dietrich reached the car he found George McCord, an attendant, in charge.

"These fellows are pretty mean today with the weather," McCord says he remarked to Dietrich as the latter entered the car to water the beasts and clean the car.

"They never would hurt me in a thousand years," said Dietrich, as he opened the cage door and slammed it behind him.

"Trilby," a old lioness, rolled on her back and struck at Dietrich playfully as he walked past her.

"Look out, boss," warned McCord. "Don't be a coward," returned Dietrich. "They are just playing."

Just then there was a yellow flash through the air and before McCord could shout a warning "Teddy," a young lion, had thrown himself upon Dietrich and knocked him across the cage.

Lioness Tried to Save.

The lion's claws slashed into Dietrich's shoulder and the blood was flowing when McCord sprang to his feet and grabbed a pitchfork. Four other lions had joined "Teddy," growling loudly and lashing their tails along the side of the cage. "Teddy" made another spring toward the bleeding man, but the aged lioness jumped in front of Dietrich as though to protect him and averted the angry lion to one side. Dietrich was trying to force his way to the door of the cage, but was caught in the rush of the other lions and went down under the growling, clawing, biting, scratching mass. Old "Trilby" was pushed aside.

McCord had grabbed a pitchfork, but the lack of room prevented its use and he was unable to get the fork into the car.

With one last cry of "My God, get me out of here," Dietrich fell to the floor again as "Teddy" hit him with his paw a blow that McCord saw slash open his chest from shoulder to shoulder.

McCord ran from the car into the street shouting for help.

Within a short time two wagon loads of policemen and his fire department apparatus arrived at the scene.

An effort was made to get the body, but the lions refused to back away. Blows on the snouts from short sticks and clubs only brought angry snarls and blows at the bars with paws. Finally McCord got hold of the belt that was around

HAPPY MOTHERHOOD

The happiness of motherhood is often checked because the mother's strength is not equal to her cares, while her selfish devotion neglects her own health. It is a duty of husband or friend to see that she gets the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which is not a drug or stimulant but nature's concentrated oil-food tonic to enrich and invigorate the blood, strengthen the nerves and aid the appetite. Physicians everywhere prescribe Scott's Emulsion for overworked, nervous, tired women; it builds up and holds up their strength. Get Scott's at your nearest drug store.

Dietrich's waist and a rope was tied to this. The body was lifted to the top of the cage and held there while men kept the lions away with iron rods which had been brought in.

The body, torn beyond recognition, was taken to an undertaking room near by.

Modern Kansas Farm Poetry.

"Turn on the electric light, mother, And start the electric fan. And set yourself down beside me On this velvet, imported divan. For a heart-to-heart talk of the old time, When we lived in a house built of sod, And didn't have nuthin' to speak of But a trust in old Kansas and God."

"We took up this hundred and sixty. An old soldier's homestead, and here We scrimped and we saved for a livin'.

An' a slim one, too, year after year, An' what with the drought an' the hoppers,

Things often look deeply gray, But we kept the old faith put a bilin'.

'Till things got to comin' our way."

Indigestion? Can't Eat? No Appetite.
